ASK THE RELATIONSHIP EXPERT

Q: I am divorced and looking to date again. Is internet dating a realistic option for busy executives like me?

A: Internet dating is very popular, and for some, it's very easy... but it's actually not as time-effective for busy executives as you might presume. Internet dating takes time and the return isn't always what you'd expect. One of the most frequent complaints we get from former internet daters is how disappointed they are when they finally meet matches in person. In far too many cases, the reality simply does not live up to the online hype, and matches rarely have as much in common in person as when they are tailoring responses to your profile. Working with a professional matchmaker is a great option for busy executives because we ensure quality dates by taking the time to screen potential matches. All of our prospective matches are 9s or 10s who are screened thoroughly, so they can't hide behind the glamour shots and great profile writing. When deciding whether to proceed, consider how much time you want to invest, what type of man/woman you are looking to meet and be prepared to expect the unexpected. Good luck... you're going to need it!
